

WET Science Center at LOTT Alliance

Olympia, WA

Every drop counts from puddles to the sea

The LOTT Alliance is a union of four government agencies in Thurston County that conserves water resources through wastewater treatment. LOTT hired AldrichPears to develop a Water Education and Technology (WET) Science Center, an interpretive space in their new administration building, and their civic plaza.

APA led LOTT through a series of visioning workshops to create a comprehensive plan for the science center. Our firm developed an approach and scientific content directed at school students and families. Interpretive experiences encourage visitors to calculate their water use with a giant calculator, give their house an H2O home makeover and investigate why water conservation is so important. Exhibits tie into school curriculum and complement facility tours.

APA provided a conceptual approach, scientific content and detailed designs. Our firm also provided creative oversight during fabrication and installation.
