Where Locals Find Themselves

As a thriving research institution, the New Brunswick Museum boasts impressive cultural and natural science collections. To become a provincial hub, the Museum made itself more accessible through a new purpose-built facility with modern exhibits.

APA worked with staff, stakeholders and Indigenous, Acadian and Celtic communities to create an experience that speaks to all residents. Engaging exhibits let visitors understand the diverse people and environments that have shaped the province. Visitors explore New Brunswick's winding rivers and rugged coastlines through an immersive theater. They discover key cultural events on a multimedia timeline and encounter unique identities through art showcases.
