

Anna Wilkinson, Content Developer

With more than ten years of experience in the museum and heritage sector, Anna brings a passion for comprehensive research and compelling storytelling to every project she works on. She has a background in history and museology and specializes in making complex ideas around culture and identity accessible to broad audiences. Her wide-ranging experience in content development has included working with Aboriginal peoples in the United States and northern Canada on community-driven cultural projects. Anna's collaborative approach to interpretation is shaped by a clear communication style and a deep appreciation of diverse perspectives.
