

Mi'kmawey Debert Cultural Centre

Debert, NS

A New Indigenous Landmark

Located on land where Mi'kmaw people have thrived for more than 11,000 years, the Mi'kmawey Debert Cultural Centre (MDCC) will be a dynamic cultural centre and a new Indigenous landmark in Canada. The Centre will strengthen the Mi'kmaw Nation's understanding of their past while supporting future generations through meaningful visitor experiences and programming.

APA is working in close collaboration with the MDCC interpretive planning team to transform many years of planning and hard work into a living, breathing cultural hub. The in-depth design process engages Elders and curatorial stakeholders. Experiences are designed to be meaningful for Mi'kmaw people first and foremost, while also welcoming visitors from Nova Scotia, Canada, and the world.
